CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Barre Cannot Doubt What Has Been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Barre, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Barre kidney sufferers.

Norman York, 29 Branch street, Barre, Vt., says: "I was subject for six years to attacks of kidney trouble. I had pains in my back and was led to believe my kidneys were out of order by the too frequent passages of the kidney secretions. If I stooped or lifted it was with the greatest difficulty that I could regain an erect position. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at E. A. Doan's drug store, and their effect was wonderful. The pain in my back soon ceased and the kidney secretions became more regular."

The above statement was given on November 10th, 1908, and was confirmed by Mrs. York on October 1st, 1908. She said: "Mr. York still thinks well of Doan's Kidney Pills, and has always recommended this remedy when he has had the opportunity."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

"The Thief" at Barre Opera House Next Monday Night.

William Winter, of The New York Tribune, has so long occupied the commanding position among the dramatic reviewers of the country as to fairly earn the title of dean. His views have force not only of the seasoned writer but of one who can adduce more by comparison than any other critic alive today. "The Thief" which will be seen at the opera house next Monday night October 26, has its original run in the Lyceum theatre, New York, where it was played for ten months.

In reviewing it, Mr. Winter contended that it should run for six thousand nights. This is his estimate of the play.

"The comedy called 'The Thief' which was produced at the Lyceum theatre on September 9th, is one of rare merit and remarkable significance, and the performance of it, which is exceptionally good, ought to have a liberal measure of public attention.

"The subject is one of supreme importance to society—is the love existing between married persons; the persons, that is to say, by whom society is mainly constituted and sustained.

"Much is suggested by the play of 'The Thief'—to persons, that is, who possess receptive minds. The elaboration of the plot—the process of unraveling by which the culprit is discovered—is not as important as is its meaning. The development of that plot, indeed, is remarkably adroit, creating anxious suspense and maintaining unbroken interest; but the substance of the play is its disclosure of the human heart—the access of suffering, the conflict of passions, the violation of elemental nature, the truth of what we are and what we feel. The play does not preach, it only reflects as in a mirror.

"The fortunes of this comedy will be observed with peculiar interest. The play called 'The Thief and The Money' which was produced at the Lyceum, had a career of about six hundred nights. If excellence of play and acting count for anything, in proof of superiority, 'The Thief' should run for six thousand nights. It is a genuine play—not a sermon nor a treatise. Uplifted souls in light of reason may learn from it that 'honesty is the best policy' and likewise that jealousy is the most terrible of the passions. Meanwhile, every lover of drama who repairs to the theatre in order to see a drama well acted, should go to see Charles Frohman's production of 'The Thief.'

Mildred The Bewitching Star of Mystery.

The charming entertainer, in her strange presentation entitled Mildredism, which is one of the big features in the performance of Mildred and Reuelere, the superb mystifiers, will illustrate her telepathic power by tests and feats in mindreading that are astounding, almost supernatural, and challenge explanation. Blindfolded, she will read from any page of any book held by some one in the audience, tell the value and date of a coin in your hand, numbers on bank bills, correctly name scores of articles in possession of the audience, describe and discover stolen and lost property, locate lost friends and do many other unexplainable things that will make the weird White Mahatmas who traveled through America a few seasons ago look like primary schoolers. Anybody in the audience may write the name of a celebrity or well known local character, conceal the paper but keep their mind on what's written, and Mildred will not only give the name, occupation and address correctly but cause a counterpart, a living likeness of the party in question to appear momentarily upon the stage. These are but a few of the many wonders developed in the presentation of the greatest entertainment mysteries, Mildredism, which will be given here at the opera house Wednesday, October 28. As one of the many features of Mildred and Reuelere's big glittering fantasy "The Flight of Princess Iris."

The Broken Flume.

We built a settling basin—
But—the flume—broke—down;
We made the workmen hasten,
But—the flume—broke—down;
We turned on all the water,
It was red as gory slaughter,
And the reason of it, daughter,
Was the flume broke down—
Yes, the flume broke down,
Sure, the flume broke down—
And the reason of it, daughter,
Was the flume broke down.

We ordered them to fix it,
But the flume broke down;
More concrete? Let them mix it—
But the flume broke down.
And every time we shouted,
"Here's clear water!" we were flouted—
For the awful news was posted,
That the flume broke down—
Yes, the flume broke down, &c.

It once scared me like a rabbit
That the flume broke down;
But it's got to be a habit—
That the flume broke down;
And when Old Age is appearing
And Grim Death is sedily nearing,
I've no doubt we'll still be hearing
That the flume broke down—
Sure, the flume broke down—
Course, the flume broke down—
On our death beds we'll be hearing
How the flume broke down.

Anyone in need of dirt, sand or gravel for grading will find it to their advantage to call on N. M. Nelson.

In the town of Weathersfield I was informed that there was not a single sheep, and that the farmers found the dairy business more profitable. In this town, under the operation of the tariff of 1857, which put wool on the free list (with the consent of a majority of the representatives from New England), there were a thousand sheep.

"In this town lived Consul Jarvis, who introduced the merino sheep into this country. He was a Henry Clay Whig, but he approved putting wool on the free list because he knew that woolen goods were made from mixed wools, and it was for the interest of the woolen mills to buy their foreign wool as cheap as possible, and that in this way, from the production of woolen goods in this country would be increased, and consequently, the production of native wool.

"I also found that the price which was being paid in Windsor county, Vt., for unwashed wool of medium quality was eighteen cents per pound. This is less than the price which prevailed under the tariff of 1857. It is obvious that the duty to eleven and twelve cents on first and second class wools had not operated to raise the price of wool, but only to increase the price of woolen clothes, blankets and the like.

"On looking at the quotation on wool in London, I found that the price of Australian wool, under the free trade in London, was as high as the price of Vermont wool in Vermont, under the so-called protective tariff.

"All this shows to my mind, the absurdity of Mr. Shaw's contention that there should be no 'protection in spots.' Put into plain English, this means that we should have a tariff like the present Dingley bill, which obstructs foreign trade as much as possible, and injures the consumer far more than it benefits the producer."
